

Monopolies in communication based industries are just the opposite of democracy. It spouts the views of a select few, as the true feelings of the majority of America.

And is so far outside the community that the corporations may as well be located on Mars.

The current corporate formats and news programs are no more diverse then their boardrooms. Trying to popularize cookie cutter bands and musicians, conforming to whatever formula has worked for them in the past.

While artists, music, and news that reflect our culture, community and diversity are stifled, and go un-heard because it is outside the boundries of the formula. And big business.
